'Black Panther' inspiring, set to change lives

Michael B. Jordan talks representation and identity in Hollywood. GREGORY WAKEMAN

The importance of "Black Panther" goes way beyond a Rotten Tomatoes score, its box office gross or how it links up with "Avengers: Infinity War."

The cultural ramifications of Ryan Coogler's blockbuster and the performances of Chadwick Boseman, Lupita Nyong'o, Danai Gurira, Letitia Wright and Michael B. Jordan are destined to be felt for many years to come, as audiences look set to embrace the diversity and authenticity that makes "Black Panther" feel so rich, distinctive and original.

Metro spoke with Jordan about his performance as the villainous Erik "Killmonger" Stevens in the movie, and what it means to African American audiences.

"I understand the importance of representation," he said. "You want to be able to identify with not just yourself but people you look like on screen, who are these characters and these roles and larger-than-life heroic superheroes."

"This is the time for it." MARVEL STUDIOS

Jordan's character travels to Wakanda, the fictional East African country that's home to superhero Black Panther, in order to dethrone Chadwick Boseman.

"As a 10-year-old I would have been motivated and inspired and had a range of emotions if I had watched this as a kid," he shared. "We've got to help these kids dream. And to help their imagination so that they can see themselves in front of the camera and on screen like this."

"It really makes an impact on how they hold themselves, and the confidence they have. To be involved in that feels really good."

This wasn't the first time

Jordan broached these issues on the big screen with co-writer and director Ryan Coogler ("Fruitvale Station," "Creed"), but it came naturally to the two friends.

"We really didn't talk about it all that much," Jordan revealed. "We kind of already knew what we were doing at this point. Representation and identity, and themes like that, we understand. When it came down to it all of the work was already done and we were just interested in shooting a movie."

And "Black Panther" is just the beginning. Because Jordan and his co-stars (mostly people of color) demand further blockbuster films with ethnically diverse casts and crews to follow the path they are paving.

"I definitely feel like this is the time for it, and that 'Black Panther' is going to open up the floodgates," he beamed. "Especially being backed by a studio like Marvel, we have the support of the biggest studio in the world. But it's also the cast, and not just that everything is going to be OK — but it's going to be awesome. All of that gives a validation to a property like this."

"There's a lot going on in our film. I just want people to go in there with an open mind and have some fun. Then, I guarantee they'll leave it with something more than they expect."

Join the millions of presale ticket holders and see "Black Panther" for yourself from Feb. 16.

Study Shows New Sex Cream Works Like Magic for Older Men

Recent warnings on sex drugs leads to the creation of an amazing no pill option; key ingredients activate sensation pathways triggering erections and arousal

Christopher Steel
San Diego, CA

The medical community now has a safer and more effective alternative to sex pills, which they can immediately start offering to male patients with sexual performance issues. It will not require a prescription.

The alternative, called Sensum+®, is an amazing new sex cream containing an active ingredient that activates a sensation pathway on the penis known as TRPA1.

When applied as directed, it leads to incredible arousal and triggers erections more easily.

It also promotes powerful climaxes and ultimately results in significant improvements in performance.

"Men can expect to experience life changing sexual improvements with regular use. The penis will become hyper sensitive, making them easily aroused and excitable," explains Dr. Bassam Damaj, the President of the company behind Sensum+®.

"And that's because Sensum+® does what no other sex pill or drug has done before – it stimulates a special sensory pathway right below the skin, which leads to phenomenal improvements in sensation."

Overtime, constant exposure (especially if circumcised) leads to decreased penis sensitivity, which can cause problems with arousal and erection quality. There just isn't enough feeling to get excited."

"Diabetes, anti-depressants and normal aging also leads to desensitization, and can make the situation even worse."

"This is what makes Sensum+® so effective and why the clinical studies and clinical use studies have been so positive."

MISDIAGNOSIS LEADS TO UNNEEDED PRESCRIPTIONS

After years of clinical research and testing, researchers discovered an incredible compound that triggers arousal and helps men achieve erections more easily.

This compound isn't a drug. It's the active ingredient in Sensum+®.

And according to users, it produces sensational results. Many men report remarkable improvements in sexual performance and overall satisfaction.

They are more sexually active than they've been in years with the average Sensum+® user over the age of 50.

According to research, many men adults and seniors who suffer sexually have lost sensation in their penis due to constant rubbing and exposure and health related issues such as diabetes, hernia surgery, use of some anti-depressants, multiple sclerosis, and other type of illnesses.

This desensitization often makes sex extremely challenging. Without a 100% feeling in the penis, its next to impossible to get truly aroused.

Worse, modern day sex drugs have absolutely no effect on sensation and are laden with side effects. They simply stimulate an erection by enhancing blood flow.

It's why most men are rarely satisfied after taking them and why Sensum+® users are always stocking up on more and couldn't be happier.

"We knew the science behind Sensum+® was there, but we never expected results like we're seeing. It's far exceeded our expectations" said a spokesperson for the company.

A STAGGERING 80% IMPROVEMENT IN SENSITIVITY

Researchers have conducted several clinical studies on Sensum+® and the results from the most recent are undoubtedly the most impressive.

A data analysis of three clinical surveys of 370 men showed that an amazing 80% of Sensum+® users experienced dramatic improvements while using the cream and as a result were aroused easier and a phenomenal boost in performance.

Additionally, 77.4% of men also reported much more satisfying climaxes, making sex for both them and their partners nearly 300% more satisfying.

"I have full feeling and sensitivity back in my penis. Everything feels better. My erections are harder, I'm more easily aroused, I can finally climax again. This stuff honestly works like magic in the bedroom. I couldn't be happier at 66!" raves one Sensum+® user.

HOW SENSUM +® WORKS

Sensum+® is a new sex cream for men that's to be applied twice a day for the first two weeks then just once every day after.

There are no harmful side effects for either the user or partner. It also does not require a prescription.

The active ingredient is an organic compound known as cinnamaldehyde with a patented combination of sexually rousing extracts.

Research shows that as men get older, they often lose sensitivity to the penis.

Although very subtle, this desensitization can significantly hinder sexual performance and lead to serious problems with becoming aroused and staying/getting hard.

The cinnamaldehyde in Sensum+® is one of the only known ingredients to activate a special sensation pathway on the penis called TRPA1. Once activated, it restores tremendous sensation to the penis, stimulating arousal and powerful erections.

Doctor Approved SENSUM+®: Triples sexual satisfaction for men by increasing "penile sensitivity"

This would explain why so many users are experiencing impressive results so quickly and why the company behind Sensum+® offers their low cost cream with an amazing guarantee.

GUARANTEE DISCOUNTED SUPPLY TAKES RISK OFF CONSUMERS

A large percentage of men report life changing results with Sensum+®. That's why it is now being sold with an above-industry standard guarantee.

"We can only make this guarantee because we are 100% certain this cream works," says Damaj.

"We want to take risk off the consumers. So besides offering massive discounts, we're also offering this guarantee, so they don't have to risk a cent."

Here's how it works: Use the cream exactly as directed and in just one week, you must feel a significant improvement in sexual sensations. You must be more easily aroused with harder, longer lasting erections and be having the best sex you've had in years.

Otherwise, simply return the empty bottles. Then, Inovus Pharmaceuticals will refund your money immediately.

HOW TO GET SENSUM +®

This is the official release of Sensum+®. As such, the company is offering a special discounted supply to any reader suffering with their sexual performance and who calls within the next 48 hours.

A special hotline number and discounted pricing has been created for all Massachusetts residents. Discounts will be available starting today at 6:00AM and will automatically be applied to all callers.

Your Toll-Free Hotline number is 1-800-965-1510 and will only be open for the next 48 hours. Only a limited discounted supply of Sensum+® is currently available in your region.

Consumers who miss out on our current product inventory will have to wait until more becomes available and that could take weeks. The company advises not to wait. Call 1-800-965-1510 today.

Steve Aoki performs at the Palladium in Worcester on Thursday night. GERRY IMAGES

Steve Aoki talks 'Kolony' tour, Gronk and pushing the boundaries of music

The world-renowned DJ reveals how he keeps the party going at 40.

MATT JUUL

Even at the age of 40, the party never stops for Steve Aoki.

Not that he's complaining. It's his job to travel the world so he can throw cakes at people's faces while dropping beats for thousands of screaming fans every night—it's not a bad gig. And despite routinely playing more than 300 shows a year, the DJ and producer hasn't lost any enthusiasm for his craft, so don't expect him to slow down.

Aoki, the son of wrestling legend and Benihana founder Rocky Aoki, is back on the road in 2018 in support of his recently released fourth studio album "Kolony." Ahead of his trip to the Boston area on Thursday night, the Grammy-nominated star explains to Metro why he continues to stay so passionate about his energetic live shows.

"You think about how many tours I've done and how many shows I've done. What is the motivating factor? It's the music, man," Aoki says. "It's the connection, making sure there's a strong connection with me and my fans, new and old. If I'm able to make music that's consistently having that relevant connection with them, then that's really the best feeling."

Aoki is especially excited about his latest tour, as rising hip-hop star Desiigner is joining him for the cross-country trips. The rapper also worked with Aoki on a remix of the international hit "Mic Drop" by K-pop group BTS.

Throughout his career, Aoki has made a habit of working with some of the best names in the industry, regardless of what genre they're known for. He's previously collaborated with the likes of Kendrick Lamar and Linkin Park, while his new album features a slew of big names, including Migos, Gucci Mane and Lil Yachty. Aoki tells Metro that he's currently working on a track with Tom Morello of Rage Against the Machine that he can't wait to show fans.

Although he's primarily known as an electro house DJ, Aoki enjoys the challenge of pushing the genre's boundaries by dipping his toes into other types of music.

"I'm always trying to rebuild the wheel and reinvent and transform and evolve the sound," Aoki says. "You want to be enough in the forefront where you're changing the game for yourself and also being part of pushing the entire culture forward."

Besides surrounding himself with music's biggest stars, Aoki generally just likes to hang out with people who are as "energized and driven" as he is, which is how he struck up a friendship with Patriots star Rob Gronkowski. The duo got to party together in South Beach last year, and Aoki admits that he loved every minute of it.

"He's so full of life. He's just got so much energy. Like that dude is almost like me, but a football player," Aoki says. "I'm so energized and driven with all the things that I do and I really look in other people to have that same kind of energy and drive. I definitely feel that in Gronk."

As one of the world's highest-paid DJs, Aoki has accomplished quite a bit over the past two decades. While he hopes for more big opportunities in the future, he's just grateful for everything he's already been given.

"I never thought I'd be even here," Aoki says. "When the opportunity comes, you got to take it and then you got to do the best that you can with it."

What should doctors say if a patient asks about e-cigarettes? GETTY IMAGES

Are e-cigarettes safe? Doctor lays out benefits and harms

A new report featuring a physician from Mass. General looks at the good and bad of e-cigarettes.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

There's plenty of evidence that smoking is bad for you, but the ruling on e-cigarettes isn't so clear. Do they help people quit smoking, or do they get people to pick up the habit?

Nancy Rigotti, a physician at Massachusetts General Hospital and a Harvard Medical School professor, hopes to shed more light on what doctors should tell patients who ask about e-cigs.

In a piece published this week in the journal Annals of Internal Medicine, Rigotti lays out the benefits and harms of e-cigarettes.

"E-cigarettes have the potential for enormous benefit if they help smokers quit," Rigotti writes. "[But] this benefit must be balanced against potential harm if e-cigarettes entice youths who would not otherwise have become cigarette smokers to try e-cigarettes, become addicted to nicotine and then switch to combustible cigarettes."

Rigotti is a member of the National Academies of Sciences, Engineering and Medicine (NASEM), which released a report on the public health consequences of e-cigarettes last month.

That report was commissioned by the Food and Drug Administration and involved NASEM experts like Rigotti; Ava Navas-Acien, an environmental health professor at Columbia University; cancer researchers, policy experts and more.

That report's main finding was that using e-cigarettes is less hazardous than continuing to smoke regular, or combustible, cigarettes, because e-cigarettes do not burn tobacco.

Switching completely from cigarettes to e-cigs will likely lower smoking-

"E-cigarettes have the potential for enormous benefit if they help smokers quit. [But] this benefit must be balanced against potential harm if e-cigarettes entice youths who would not otherwise have become cigarette smokers to try e-cigarettes, become addicted to nicotine and then switch to combustible cigarettes."

Nancy Rigotti, physician

related health hazards, the experts found — but those who continue to smoke both types don't see these benefits.

The NASEM committee also found no evidence that e-cigarettes increase someone's risk of cardiovascular or pulmonary disease, cancer or other "adverse outcomes." However, in her new writing,

Rigotti warns that "lack of evidence does not equal evidence of no risk."

More research on the long-term effects of e-cigs are needed, Rigotti cautions.

Though the use of e-cigarettes may increase the chances that teens who don't smoke will try combustible cigarettes, the NASEM report concluded overall that the net effect of e-cigarettes is positive and that they'll likely save lives over the next 50 years of use in the United States.

The NASEM report didn't, however, give advice for what doctors should tell smokers about these electronic versions. That's why Rigotti added her own guidance in this week's publication.

"I tell patients that using e-cigarettes is less harmful than continuing to smoke cigarettes, but because e-cigarettes are so new, I caution them that many questions about their long-term safety remain unanswered," she writes.

Essentially, Rigotti wants to tell people who want to try e-cigarettes that they should switch over to the devices completely to stop smoking combustible cigarettes. Eventually, they should try to stop smoking e-cigarettes, too.

"Overall, the message I aim to convey," she writes, "is that I will continue to support and assist patients on their journey to becoming non-smokers."

Activist Angela Davis donates her archives to Harvard

Angela Davis is an icon of the 1960s, known for her political activism, academic achievements and overall radicalism.

Now, Davis' life, through her writings and photos, will live on at Harvard.

Harvard University announced this week that Davis is donating her archives to the Schlesinger Library on the History of Women in America, which is at the school's Radcliffe Institute.

In total, Harvard is acquiring 151 boxes of materials, which represent decades of Davis' life as an activist, scholar, educator and author.

"My papers reflect 50 years of involvement in activist and scholarly collaborations seeking to expand the reach of justice in the world," Davis, 74, said in a statement. "I am very happy that at the Schlesinger Library they will join those of June Jordan, Patricia Williams, Pat Parker, and so many other women who have been advocates of social transformation."

Angela Davis has worked toward social justice on multiple fronts, including the Civil Rights Movement, feminism and prisons. GETTY IMAGES

The collection will include a manuscript of her autobiography with edits by Toni Morrison, photos of young Davis — including one in which she's posing with Fidel Castro, tape reels from her radio show "Angela Speaks," a painting done for Davis by a California death-row inmate, materials around her arrest in connection with the 1970 shooting of a court judge by an acquaintance who used firearms registered in her name and more.

Davis has pursued social justice across multiple fronts, from the Civil Rights Movement to feminism to the study of punishment and prisons, which led her to found Critical Resistance, which works to end the prison-industrial complex.

Elizabeth Hinton, an assistant professor of history and African and African-American studies at Harvard, said in a statement that she expects to use materials from Davis' archives in her classes.

"That will make history come alive for generations of students," she said, "and hopefully inspire them to pursue social justice goals even after they leave Harvard's campus." KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

GAS PIPELINES

Gas pipeline opponents urge Gov. Baker to 'break up' with industry

Clean energy advocates on Wednesday delivered a Valentine's Day message to Gov. Charlie Baker, handing one of his aides a bouquet of roses and a stack of red construction-paper hearts with the handwritten message, "Break up with gas pipelines."

Addressing the group gathered outside Baker's office, Cathy Kristofferson of Ashby said the governor has not ruled out natural gas as part of the state's energy mix, and called on him to do so.

"We need the state agencies to hold these gas companies for what we need for emissions reductions and all that, so we would like to have them actually now take gas off the table, break up with gas pipelines and bring on the solar, and the wind and the storage," she said.

Natural gas plays a key role in the state's energy mix, and a business coalition is urging the state to increase access to natural gas to help ward off potential reliability issues and to serve as a bridge to the gradual transition to renewable energy sources. In 2016, Massachusetts generated 66 percent of its electricity from natural gas, according to the U.S. Energy Information Administration.

The demonstration came two days after a Senate committee endorsed an omnibus clean energy bill that would ban new natural gas infrastructure, set new targets for emission reductions and use the market to curb fossil fuel use.

Among other measures, the 71-page bill includes language setting it as the state's goal to obtain 100 percent of its electricity from renewable sources by 2035 and 100 percent of all energy — including for transportation, heating and agricultural uses — from renewable sources by 2050.

Mass Power Forward, a coalition that held Wednesday's lobby day, said the Senate bill includes several of its priorities, including "accelerating the Renewable Portfolio Standard, solar for all, pushing back on gas pipelines and combating climate change."

The coalition also backs a bill filed by Reps. Michelle DuBois and RoseLee Vincent (H 2913) that aims "to promote environmental justice, eliminate disparities with respect to exposure to environmental toxins" and ensure access to environmental benefits, according to the bill text.

Alice Arena, of the group Fore River Residents Against Compressor Station, said the bill would "put teeth" in current policies around environmental justice. Arena's group opposes a proposed natural gas compressor station in North Weymouth for reasons including potential exposure to toxic pollutants.

"Bad health, that's what we need to tell you," Arena, a Weymouth resident, said. "We need to tell you stories about the sickness in the [Fore River] basin that have been caused not just by historical pollution like the shipyard or the Edgar coal-fired plant that we still have residual problems from, but the idea that you can put another polluting industry in the basin."

Several dead at Florida high school after former student opens fire

The bloodshed was the latest outbreak of gun violence that has become a regular occurrence at U.S. schools and colleges.

A former student at a Florida high school opened fire in the school on Wednesday, causing "numerous fatalities" and wounding at least 14 people before he was arrested by police, authorities said.

The attack took place shortly before dismissal at Marjory Stoneman

Douglas High School in Parkland, about 45 miles north of Miami, sending hundreds of panicked students fleeing into the streets while dozens of police and emergency services swarmed the area.

"There are numerous fatalities. It's a horrific situation," Broward County Schools Superintendent Robert Runcie told reporters. He said the school district had gotten no warning of a potential shooter and there was no evidence of more than one shooter.

The gunman, about 18 years old, surrendered to police quietly, said Broward County Sheriff Scott Israel.

Fourteen wounded people were transported to area hospitals, Israel said, offering few details on the shooter's identity or motive.

"There was a time when he did attend the school," Israel said. "I don't know why he left, I don't know when he left."

Students hid in classrooms until they were rescued by police in tactical gear, friends and family members said.

McKenzie Hartley, 19, who identified herself as the sister of a student, described the scene in a text message: "She heard him shooting through the windows of classrooms and two students were shot."

Panicked parents checked on their children.

"It is just absolutely horrifying. I can't believe this is happening," Lissette Rozenblat, whose daughter goes to the school, told CNN. Her daughter called her to say she was safe but the student also told her mother she heard the cries of a person who was shot.

"She was very nervous. She said that she could hear the person who was shot crying out for help," she told CNN. "My daughter is safe, and I am very grateful."

Live television showed dozens of students, weaving their way between law enforcement officers with heavy weapons and helmets, and large numbers of emergency vehicles including police cars, ambulances and fire trucks.

The shooting was the latest in a deadly series of attacks at U.S. schools.

The school had recently held a meeting to discuss what to do in such an attack, Ryan Gott, a 15-year-old freshman told CNN.

"My prayers and condolences to the families of the victims of the terrible Florida shooting," President Donald Trump said on Twitter. "No child, teacher or anyone else should ever feel unsafe in an American school."

Israel struggled to describe the scene: "It's catastrophic. There really are no words." REUTERS

Switzerland beyond the slopes

The best things to do in Switzerland that don't require strapping on skis.

Fodor's Travel

Stroll Through Lucerne

In the geographic heart of the country, Lucerne offers a quintessential Swiss experience: Jaw-dropping mountains lead to a medieval town nestled along the edge of a sapphire-blue lake lined with waterfront promenades and crisscrossed by picture-perfect, wood-covered bridges.

Go to the Top of Europe

With an altitude of 11,333 feet, the Jungfrau is the most accessible high-altitude peak in Europe. A 30-minute train ride takes you to the Top of Europe restaurant, a glass-and-steel building with views of the Eiger. Go even higher with a high-speed elevator that takes you 364 feet up to the Sphinx Terrace and the vast Aletsch Glacier, the longest glacier in the Swiss Alps.

Listen to Music

The Swiss hills are alive with the sound of roughly

300 music festivals. A few of the biggest include the Lucerne Festival, Paleo in Nyon and, of course, the world-famous Montreaux

Jazz Festival. In July, the festival hosts international jazz and pop fixtures as well as up-and-coming artists. The waterfront setting includes several free shows and food and drink stalls.

Eat Cheese

More than 450 types of cheese are produced in Switzerland, but two cheesy dishes reign supreme: fondue and raclette.

Fondue, a country-wide staple, is a mix of hard cheese and a dash of white wine, garlic and brandy. Raclette is even simpler: a wedge of cheese is heated to melting, then scraped onto potatoes and cornichons.

See Chagall

In 1967, a retrospective of Marc Chagall's work brought the Russian-born artist to Zurich. At 80 years old, he sat in the Fraumünster and agreed to take on the long sought-after project of creating five stained-glass windows for the famous church. Installed in 1970, the sapphire- and ruby-colored windows have drawn art lovers and tourists ever since.

Go for a Hike

Small yellow signs dot nearly 40,000 miles of hiking trails throughout Switzerland, including the Swiss National Park, the Alps' oldest national park and UNESCO biosphere reserve. Along nearly 50 miles of hiking trails, you'll spot winding rivers, dense Alpine forest, and possibly ibexes, chamois, marmots and golden eagles.

Ride the rails

Swiss trains run like clockwork and they're an efficient, easy, and speedy way to get around. They also wind through such stunning scenery that the journey becomes the experience. The most scenic are the Glacier Express between Zermatt and St. Moritz and the Bernina Express, which is the highest Alpine railway, crossing famous bridges and viaducts through Europe's highest concentration of hilltop castles.

Paddle the lakes

There are several thousand lakes in Switzerland, with one estimate putting the number at 7,000. Cruising along the crystalline water with the majestic Alps in the background is an idyllic experience. From Belle Époque paddle steamers to dinner cruises, there are an abundance of options. Favorites include those on Lucerne, Thun, Lugano, Geneva and Zurich lakes.

Discover the origins of the universe

The home to the world's largest, most powerful particle accelerator

Located in the canton of Graubünden, known as the home of the legendary Heidi, is Switzerland's oldest town: Chur. The more than 5,000 year old town is picturesque, with narrow streets and cobblestone alleys lined with shops and cafes.

Visit the Olympic Museum

On a gentle slope above Lake Geneva sits the Olympic Museum, a modern-day shrine to the competitors, creators and engineers behind the games. Through signs in both English and French, along with audio, video, and interactive technology, the museum traces Olympic history thematically, looking at its creation, design, architecture, technology, and, of course, the athletes.

Eat like James Bond

Not far from Interlaken, the Schilthorn mountain rises up more than 9,700 feet. At its peak, accessed by a four-stage cable car ride, sits the revolving Piz Gloria restaurant, famous as the set of the 1969 James Bond movie On Her Majesty's Secret Service.

Go Medieval

Switzerland is littered with castles, but the most famous is Chateau de Chillon in Montreux. The 12th-century, well-preserved medieval castle perches on a rock island on Lake Geneva (Lac Lemán) and has inspired writers like Lord Byron and Jean-Jacques Rousseau. THE NEXT FOUR NUMBERS TO BE RETIRED IN BOSTON

When Paul Pierce's No. 34 was raised to the TD Garden rafters on Sunday, it got me thinking. Whose number in Boston should be retired next?

The Red Sox have done most of the work in recent years, retiring Pedro Martinez's No. 45 in 2015, Wade Boggs' No. 26 in 2016, and David Ortiz's No. 34 in 2017.

Pierce's number retirement certainly won't be the last in this town. So I put together a list of the next number that I think should and will be retired by each of the four major Boston teams, in the order of when it will happen:

No. 21

Roger Clemens

Again, it seems like the Sox are in the midst of a number-retirement phase, so it wouldn't shock me if they were preparing to honor another Red Sox legend in the near future. If that's the case, then it should be none other than Clemens.

Clemens once again failed to get the Hall-of-Fame nod this year, but his percentage of the vote increased from 54.1 in 2017, to 57.3 in 2018. You need 75 percent of the vote to get in.

The Baseball Hall of Fame is certainly a factor. I've asked Red Sox president Sam Kennedy about Clemens' No. 21 on multiple podcasts, and every time he's referenced the organization's usual standard that is the Baseball Hall of Fame. Of course, there are exceptions to every rule, and the most recent one was last year, when the Red Sox wasted no time hanging Ortiz' No. 34 in right field.

Ortiz should be a lock for the Hall of Fame, but in the world of PED rumors, you never know how the baseball writers are going to vote. And that's basically what Clemens is battling to get into Cooperstown.

Regardless, the Red Sox have a good relationship with Clemens. He was inducted into the organization's Hall of Fame in 2014. And there's no denying that he put together a Hall-of-Fame resume during his 13 years in Boston alone.

And oh yeah, since Clemens left for Toronto after the 1996 season, nobody in a Red Sox uniform has ever worn No. 21. And I don't think anybody ever will. But it's time to make that official.

No. 5

Kevin Garnett

This was the elephant in the room during Pierce's ceremony at the Garden on Sunday. Garnett was present, and was mentioned in pretty much every speech that was given. Rightfully so. It wasn't Garnett's night, but nobody is denying that, without him, there would be no 2008 NBA Championship. In fact, without Garnett, Pierce's number probably wouldn't even be retired. So, KG is a major reason why Pierce got to have his legendary moment on Sunday.

That type of importance to a championship organization — even if it only lasted six seasons — is good enough to have No. 5 retired in my book.

No. 33

No one will ever wear No. 12 for the Pats or No. 33 for the Bruins ever again after these old guys hang 'em up. GETTY IMAGES

Zdeno Chara

The B's captain turns 41 in March, but he continues to win the battle against Father Time. Perhaps if Tom Brady wasn't a complete freak, we'd be paying more attention to Chara's longevity in the NHL, especially given his size.

But there's no question, being the captain of the Bruins' only Stanley Cup winner since 1972, and a future Hockey Hall of Famer, Chara's No. 33 will one day be the second No. 33 raised to the TD Garden rafters. I think the Bruins will also get around to retiring Patrice Bergeron's No. 37 at some point, but at 32 years old, he's got plenty of time left on the ice.

No. 12

Tom Brady

Do you really need me to explain this one? Brady is the greatest quarterback in the history of the NFL. He is one of only two players to win five Super Bowls, and he's been to a whopping eight of them. At 40 years old, he just won his third regular season MVP award. And he has at least three years left in him.

Once Brady is done

though, nobody in a Patriots uniform will ever be able to wear No. 12 again.

This isn't even up for debate.

SHAUN WHITE IS LIKELY DISGUSTING

A refresher on what snowboarder Shaun White was accused of by Lena Zawaideh – a drummer in White's crap garage band, "Bad Things." (Disclaimer: The Holier-than-thou Olympics crowd does not want you to read this).

In a 2016 complaint, White was said to have pressured Zawaideh into joining the band and then he allegedly began harassing her and trying to control her appearance. The harassment is said to have included White constantly showing her pornographic videos either in person or in text messages. White allegedly would often show her pictures of other men's penises and even a video of two people murdering a bear and having sex on top of it. Zawaideh also claimed that White showed her as a hardcore porn involving a priest, a nun and feces, titled, "Church of Fudge."

NAME SHAMING

God bless people with unfortunate names. The worst one I ever heard was a poor girl named, "Beverly Garbage." It truly takes a tough cookie to stick that one out without taking several trips to the Social Security office.

In the sports world, there's sadly a Baltimore broadcaster named, "Gerry Sandusky," and this week, Cavs forward Larry Nance was told to "rot in prison!" by one Twitter user who confused him with disgraced gymnastics doctor Larry Nassar.

At least Nance was kind about it, writing back: "Wrong guy bud ... you're looking for the gymnastics guy."

SERIOUSLY, WHY WAS MALCOLM BENCHED?

The only logical theory I've heard so far regarding the benching of Malcolm Butler in the Super Bowl by Bill Belichick is as follows: Belichick truly did want Eric Rowe starting the game as a way to initially confuse the Eagles. When Belichick told Butler that plan just prior to kickoff, Butler flipped out because he wasn't going to get to officially "start" in the Super Bowl. It's then that Belichick's stubbornness arose, and he basically said to himself, "To hell with this guy" and made him sit and watch the Super Bowl from the sidelines the entire game.

Vitamin B1 (Thiamine) After Cardiac Arrest Study

Learn about this post cardiac arrest study that may affect you or someone you know.

Cardiac arrest is an emergency condition in which your heart and breathing stop, requiring cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) to restart the heart. Sudden cardiac arrest affects approximately 300,000 people annually in the U.S.

Thiamine After Cardiac Arrest (THACA) is an emergency medicine research study designed to determine if Vitamin B1 (Thiamine) can improve survival and prevent brain injury in patients who have had a cardiac arrest. There are currently no medications known to have a beneficial effect on post-arrest outcome, and brain injury and death are very common. Vitamin B1 deficiency is not uncommon after cardiac arrest, and deficiency is known to cause brain injury in other settings. This research study is taking place at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center and will last for approximately 4-5 years. Participants who are brought to the hospital after a cardiac arrest and are enrolled in this study will be randomly assigned to receive Vitamin B1 or placebo (no active medication) for two days after suffering a cardiac arrest.

Because of the importance of administering Vitamin B1 (Thiamine) as soon as possible after cardiac arrest in order to maximize the chance of finding a benefit, this study will be conducted under exception from informed consent (EFIC) in accordance with the federal Food and Drug Administration (FDA) regulations. EFIC is allowed only when testing possible treatments for life-threatening conditions for which there is no alternative proven treatment, when obtaining consent is not possible because the study treatment must be administered quickly and a legally authorized representative of the patient is not present or reachable.

When legally authorized representatives are available to provide consent, research staff will obtain consent prior to enrollment. For participants enrolled under EFIC, they or their representatives will be notified of enrollment as soon as possible and asked if they would like to continue participation, with the option to withdraw from the study at any time.

The purpose of this handout is to notify our community about this study and to provide contact information and resources where you can learn more. If you do not wish to be a participant in this study, please visit the website below or call the number listed below to find out how you can opt out. Individuals who opt out will be sent a bracelet and the study team will maintain a list of these individuals to ensure they are not enrolled under EFIC.

Aries An impulsive act may seem like the thing, but before you jump into something that requires financial assistance, look at the facts and figures. Protect yourself against loss.

Taurus Someone will take advantage of you. Don't let compliments go to your head. Only do what you feel is worth your time and effort. Someone's motives are questionable.

Gemini You must draw the line if someone is placing too much pressure on you. Don't offer something that you cannot deliver. Honesty will be in your best interest.

Cancer Refuse to let a friend, colleague or loved one take advantage of you. There is only so much you can do before you are faced with an emotional, financial or physical cost.

Leo Scrutinize contracts, money matters and joint ventures before you give the go-ahead. If someone puts up a fuss because you ask questions, know enough to walk away.

Virgo Look over personal papers. Be careful when sharing confidential information. One of your peers is likely to use what you divulge to discredit you or take advantage of you.

Libra Personal changes will make a difference to your life and the people in it. Don't go overboard when shopping or socializing.

Scorpio Consider the changes you want to make and the consequences your choices will have on you and on those you love. Make love a priority and offer kindness over discord.

Sagittarius You'll be tempted to take on too much or to overspend. Before you commit, look for hidden costs. Someone will try to trick you into something you don't need.

Capricorn Moderation will be required when dealing with others. Stick to your regular routine and avoid being persuaded to participate in something that is costly or discrediting.

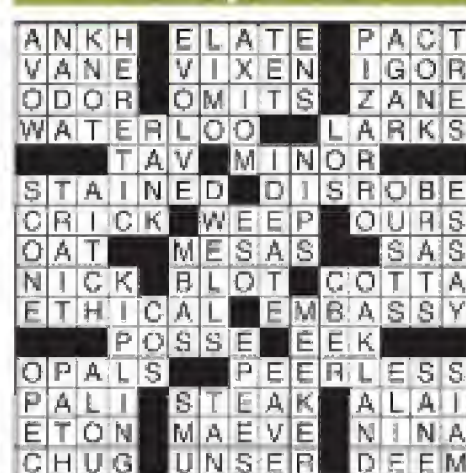

Aquarius Stick to what's affordable and what can help you maintain a healthy and clear attitude. Revert to a regimented routine that worked for you in the past.

Pisces When it comes to legal, financial or health issues, look at the big picture and decide what's best for you. Trust your instincts to guide you in the right direction. EUGENIA LAST
